DOWN WITH DOGFISH!

Petition for Bounty Will Be Presented in the Senate.

Senator Dryden of New Jersey Will Offer the Bill.

Upon the reassembling of Congress next December, Senator Dryden of New Jersey will present to the Senate a petition, similar to the one presented to the House last winter by Congressman Tirrell of this state, asking that the government pay a bounty of two cents for each dogfish killed along the Atlantic coast between Cape Hatteras and Eastport, Me.

These petitions are the result of combined work by the fishing industry along the coast and set forth reasons why Congress should pass the Tirrell bill to prevent the further devouring of food fish and lobsters by the millions of dogfish.

The proposition has already received the indorsement of several of the senators and representatives. Next winter a hearing on the petitions will be given before the fisheries committees at Washington, and it is probable that the fish industry will be largely represented.

Hines with 580 tubs, Mabel D. Hines with 150,000 pounds and sch. Effie Morrissey with 140,000 pounds. The crew of the Mooween report mackerel of the largest size constantly about their trawls while they were fishing off Anticosti.

SCARES THE MACKEREL.

Firing Warship Guns Out South Drives Fish Away.

Capt. G. Melvin McClain of the seiner George Willard, which has just returned from the fishing grounds off Martha's Vineyard says that in his opinion the target practice of the big warships off there, and the firing of their big guns has scared away the mackerel. He says that the sound can be heard louder than thunder fully 70 miles away, and that at a distance of 30 miles it would fairly shake the vessel. Since it commenced off Squibnocket Point, no mackerel had been taken in the locality, although there were lots there previously, and he is of the opinion that there is now not a mackerel within 40 miles off there. It is well known that these fish are very susceptible to sound and will rush from it, and not only Capt. McClain, but many other mackerel catchers explain the disappearance of the fish in that locality in this way.

Fine Stock.

Sch. A. E. Whyland, Capt. Fred. Morrissey, stocked $7845.34 on her recent salt bank trip, the crew making the fine share of $237.98. Capt. Fred. is always up in the front rank for good and early fares.

Swordfish.

A consignment of 21 swordfish from New London reached Boston yesterday.

HAS FINE FARE.

Sch. Maxine Elliot Arrived Home This Noon.

Used Her Codfish Seine to Good Advantage.

Sch. Maxine Elliott, Capt. Alden Geel, arrived from the Sable Island ground this noon with a fine fare of 275,000 pounds of salt cod and pollock, the latter predominating.

The Elliot left here April 11 on a salt fishing trip and has been gone only 10 weeks. She took as her fishing equipment a seine made expressly for catching codfish, being the first vessel on the coast to go on such a trip. The trip was in the nature of an experiment which has proven a success.

The vessel fished in the shoal water about the bars of Sable Island, and the seine worked all right. Codfish were not plentiful, but there were lots of pollock, so Capt. Geel, like the sensible skipper that he is, considered all fish that came to his net, and saved and salted his pollock as well as the more aristocratic cod and brought home a good fare.

Norway Cod Fishery.

The Finmarken, Norway, codfishery has yielded 7,300,000 pounds thus far this season.

MACKEREL NEWS.

Two Good Trips at Newport This Forenoon.

Capt. Cusick Brings Interesting Mackerel Report.

Sch. Dauntless arrived at this port yesterday afternoon with 25 barrels of fresh mackerel taken off Race Point. The fare sold to the Gloucester Fresh Fish Co. at 11 cents each.

Sch. Ralph L. Hall arrived at this port this morning from off Block Island with her seines badly torn. Her master, Capt. Frank H. Hall, reports lots of fish out in that vicinity, more than he ever saw before, but very wild. It was simply a case of set as often as one wanted to at any kind of a school, but they were so wild that it was next to impossible to stop them. Once in a while a vessel would be lucky and make a haul. The fish seemed crazy and all the time chasing big bodies of lant, with which the water was fairly alive. One noticeable feature this season out there, was the absence of any red feel in the water.

Capt. Hall says that all the skippers agree that they never saw so many mackerel as there has been lately from Montauk to far to the eastward of No Man's Land.

Capt. Joseph V. Cusick of Sch. Helen G. Wells reports that two weeks ago a very large body of mackerel was for several days on Louisburg bank, about 25 miles off Louisburg, C. B., where he was codfishing. He says that the farther off shore they went, the more solid the mackerel seemed to be, and that the cod fish which they caught, many of them, had the largest kind of mackerel in their stomachs.

The following seiners are at Newport this morning with fares:

Sch. Mary E. Harty, 100 bbls. fresh mackerel.

Sch. Natalie B. Nickerson, 100 bbls. fresh mackerel.

Sch. Constellation was there yesterday with 40 barrels of fresh mackerel.

Short Lobsters.

Deputy Fish and Game Wardens William W. Nixon of this city and Birney of Boston were in Manchester this morning and seized 39 short lobsters which they found in the possession of Joseph J. Slade of that town. Slade will be arraigned in the Salem district court tomorrow morning on the charge of violating the lobster law.

TO CURE SILVER HAKE.

Cunningham & Thompson To Establish Plant at Portsmouth.

The Portsmouth Chronicle prints the following:

"The curing of the fish known as silver hake has come to be an important industry and a curing plant is soon to be established in this city. Cunningham & Thompson of Gloucester have leased and will soon occupy the old Shea building on Long wharf, owned by Thomas G. Lester, and will prepare the fish for market there.

"The firm will be supplied with hake by E. Newton & Co., who have built large weirs at Wallis Sands, Whalesback and Little Harbor. Twelve men are employed about these weirs and they collect the fish every morning. A big summer business is expected by both firms."
